Cattle Raising has assumed a new importance. Due largely to higher prices, the value of cattle and calves on Mississippi farms was $131.5 million in 1950 as compared with $64.5 million in 1945, $27.2 million in 1940 ard $42.9 million in 1930. Farm income to Mississippians is now less dependent on cotton. Income from the sale of cotton lint and cott nseed recently has averaged 60 to 65 per cent of the annual cash receipts from marketings, less than the 70 per cent which was common just a few years
